Official Photographs of the Riparian Arts Project Public Paintings

Began in 2016, this project is currently a series of public art pieces inspired by historical folklore drawn from the Great Lakes region. Riparian refers to something that is "Inhabiting, or situated on the bank of a river (or body of water)." The stories, tall tales, fables, old chestnuts that inspire these images largely connect with some of the cultural and natural environs of the peninsular state of Michigan and its city of the Straights.
